SHOWCASE OF SKILLS

INAUGURAL EVENT AIMS TO HIGHLIGHT TRADE SKILLS OPPORTUNITIES, CAREERS FOR NEXT GENERATION

Next spring on the Capitol Campus in Olympia, 25 teams of five students each from 25 construction programs will be a buzz building 25 homeless shelters in a one-day competition, highlighting career and technical education skills.

Billed as the 2017 Career and Technical Education (CTE) Showcase of Skills, this first-time annual event will take place on March 27, 2017.

// JAN ROHILA
ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES DIRECTOR

Students from Washington's public high schools, skills centers, and community and technical colleges will take part in the event. Showcase participants are students who are enrolled in career and technical education programs that will lead to apprenticeships or further education after high school, providing them with the skills, hands-on knowledge and experience to enter into high-skill, high-wage careers.

In addition to helping students hone their building skills, all the shelters built and completed during the competition will be donated to local communities around the state to help address the growing issue of homelessness.

The competition is a joint effort by business, workforce, education and other organizations to highlight trade and technical skills among teen and young adults. These skills can lead to future careers in the residential construction market.

HOW YOU CAN GET INVOLVED

BIAW, in its commitment to promote workforce opportunities for the next generation, is a member of the 2017 CTE Showcase planning group and is seeking BIAW members to help donate and/or sponsor this innovative event. Many thanks go to the event's first sponsor, BIAW member James Hardie, for their generous donation of products and resources.

To donate or for additional sponsor information, contact BIAW Administrative Services Director Jan Rohila at (360) 352-7800 or janr@biaw.com.
